General Introduction

The After School Reading Activities series provides a unique collection of reproducible activities specifically designed for practicing of key reading skills in a less formal format. Exercises provide a variety of learning experiences that inspire creativity while encouraging reading comprehension and writing practice. After School Reading Activities features worksheets as well as hands-on activities that present opportunities for students with different learning styles to benefit from the contents. The activities are designed to be used by individuals, pairs of students, and small groups.

Standards Mastery

Although this series is meant to provide practice in a nonthreatening format, activities support many of the NCTE/IRA standards. Experience with several genres of writing (including fiction, nonfiction, and poetry) is included within each skill area. Activities demand that a variety of strategies be used in order to complete the work. Examples of strategies are using prior knowledge, using word identification strategies, and using graphics. Students will be asked to evaluate and synthesize information and then to communicate it in a variety of ways, from writing brief sentences, to filling in a story map, to creating pictures, to participating in group activities.

Organization

The book is arranged in skill areas as follows:

Word Skills

- Arranged in a progressive, sequential format
- Letter/sound recognition, digraphs, blends, and more

Vocabulary Development

- High-interest and high-frequency words, including reproducible pages for making flash cards
- Cross-curricular (science, social studies, and math)

Reading Comprehension

- One- and two-page articles
- Story elements, inferencing, following directions, and more

Use

As you prepare to make this series a part of an activity schedule, have the following items on hand:

Crayons	Stapler	Scissors
Markers	Brads	Glue
Construction paper	Hole punch	Library books
Tagboard	Pencils	Reference materials

Structure

Plan to use the reproducible pages in centers, for independent practice, or with small groups of students. Photocopy the pages of flash cards, and devote time to having the students make the flash cards for future use. Reproduce the selected pages to provide students with a variety of activities designed to ensure increased achievement while they are having fun.

Extension Activities

The format of many of the activities make them ideal for adapting the type of exercise to other materials. Some ideas are:

Choose a popular poem or a familiar passage from a story, and have students circle a given letter sound. Take the opportunity to expose students to various types of prints such as newspapers, magazines, and brochures. Focus on the letter sounds being taught in class, and progress into the more difficult digraphs, blends, and word endings and word families.

Have students write or dictate their own word riddles, using vocabulary from a lesson they are currently studying. Students should progress from using pictures and drawings in their riddles to using words and sentences.

The sets of flash cards have many uses such as these:

The flash cards are printed back-to-back and can be removed from the book, colored, laminated, and reused. They can also be reproduced so each student has his or her own set. Use the cards to increase meaning vocabulary in the theme they are based upon. The words can be used in a self-checking quiz situation, or partners can quiz each other. Have students reveal the word or the definition and then give the other side. Students should be able to master the words either way.

The sets of flash cards can be used individually or together. One way to use the cards is to have students choose two cards from each theme and use them in an oral story. Another way is to sort the words by category or theme, by syllables, or by beginning sounds.

The flash cards can also be used as the required vocabulary for shape books in certain themes.
