PREFACE

Start Again

There is motion in stillness and stillness in motion.

I'm always a little nervous before a long run, often it hurts. I'm an enthusiastic but not particularly talented runner. Nor am I a particularly good Buddhist. Sometimes Buddhism is uncomfortable to follow any particular doctrine or school of Buddhism. Sometimes days pass and I forget to meditate, I can't remember half the steps of the Eightfold Path.

Nevertheless, this book is the result of the combination of two important things in my life – running and meditation – and what they have taught me. Running and meditation have been the two principal
